Pfizer Australia to move into a new, state of the art building in the innovative hub in the Sydney CBD

Pfizer Australia today announced it is relocating its Australian office into a new building in the heart of the Sydney CBD. The building - "Barrack Place", located at 151 Clarence St, will be one of the most advanced buildings in its class in Sydney when it is finished in 2018 and provides Pfizer Australia with an unprecedented opportunity to change its ways of working and plan for the next generation of Pfizer's proud contribution to the health of all Australians.

Pfizer will occupy the top four floors of this new prestigious building in an emerging entrepreneurial and innovation hub. The immediate business precinct is where many innovative businesses have set up such as Atlassian and Apple.

"We are proud of our manufacturing legacy at our West Ryde site over the past 60 years," said Melissa McGregor, Managing Director of Pfizer Australia.

"Locating Pfizer Australia in this burgeoning business precinct - in the heart of the Sydney CBD - positions us strongly for the next 60 years. We are making a deliberate move to be at the cross section of society – businesses, Government, customers, and the general community all intersect in the Sydney CBD.

"We will be part of the innovation and creativity that surrounds the area. In part because of the location, we will continue to attract vibrant and talented people to work at Pfizer Australia, as we have done for many years."

The location offers employees excellent public transport options with trains, light rail, buses and ferries all within walking distance. Pfizer is delivering on its sustainability responsibilities by getting 400 single-occupancy cars off the road every business day.

The building is currently under construction and is being built to world-class standards in terms of amenities, energy rating and environmental sustainability.

“As it’s a new building, we have the opportunity to design, shape and construct our internal workspace to our exacting and unique specifications. As you can appreciate, such opportunities are rare – particularly in this exciting location,” Ms McGregor said.

Pfizer Australia plans to move its employees by December 2018 when building works are completed. Pfizer was assisted by Pepper Property for its Sydney office search.
